Work on the Streets

Seventy men are to be put to work this morning to clean the streets. It is the intention to give the work to the heads of needy families. Five times as many men are registered as can be employed. If the general relief committee had the money it could supplement the work of the board of public works and to great advantage.

There are alleys, rarely seen by the public but much used by the people who live in them, which are almost impassable. Living in these alleys are men who clamor for work to keep themselves and their families off the charity list. Money could be well expended in this way, but the committee has not the money.

WITNESSES in the Cronin case on the side of the state have reason to be nervous, for some of that gang of assassins are yet at large.

Removal of the Public Library. It does not appear that the board of education has acted wisely in agreeing to move the public library from its present quarters to the Masonic temple. The present quarters are well located and easily reached and the new ones will certainly have no advantage in this respect. The difference in rent is in favor of the present quarters. The decision of the board was not reached with the customary prudence of that body, which the people of Wheeling have been in the habit of regarding as an exemplar among the city bodies.

THE general relief committee is in need of wagons and carts to haul coal to people who can't wait for the coal. Here is a chance to help where it will

Getting Down to Business. The general relief committee has gone

o work with a will and is trying to get its business on a business basis. When the machinery gets to running well it is thought that no needy ones will be overlooked and no imposters allowed to take what the deserving should have. It takes a little time to get these things well started, but some of the most careful and most earnest men in the community are giving the matter their close attention.

INDIVIDUAL effort can often help organized charity. It it is known to any citizen that a family is suffering and has not been reported to the ward or general committee, let him make it known. There may be deserving cases that will never get to the knowledge of the proper authorities in any other

To-NIGHT's performance of "The Fire Patrol" at the Opera House is for the benefit of the relief fund. The play is put on substantially without cost to the committee and the Opera House is given on the same terms. The house should be packed.

The man who is annoying public men in Washington with crank letters would look well behind the bars until he shall have recovered. The time to deal with such fellows is as soon as they begin to show themselves:

CHARITABLE organizations should send to the general relief committee at once the names of the persons they are helping, so that the good work may not be duplicated.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S art portfolios are coming right along now. The publishers promise that there shall be no more delay.

A VERY HOT ROAST

For Hoke Smith Dished Up by a Georgia Democrat.

Atlanta Dispatch in Cincinnati Enquirer (Dem.) Something of a sensation has been created in political circles by the publication of a letter written by B. M. Blackburn to President Cleveland. Blackburn was boomed as the original Cleveland man in Georgia in opposition to the claim of Hoke Smith, and for which the latter was honored with a cabinet position. Blackburn was editor of the Atlanta Herall and also chairman of the state Democratic committee. For vigorously championing Mr. Cleveland's cause he was ousted from his newspaper position. He continued the fight in the political field and subsequently when made a presidential elector he and his friends thought that surely his services would receive proper recognition. He was induced to apply for an appointment and his claims were warmly indorsed by Speaker Crisp, Governor Northen and other prominent Georgians. He named Mexico, Dresden, Frankfort and Manchestor, either of which plums would please him. The President offered him Cienfuegos or St. Thomas, both of which he declined. Later Mr. Cleveland tendered him a $2,000 place in the census bureau. This aroused Blackburn's ire, and led him to make public the correspondence with the President. In this to the claim of Hoke Smith, and for and led him to make public the correspondence with the President. In this letter he says:

"I desire to call your attention to the strange anomaly that places $15,500 out of $22,200 in foreign appointments given to Georgia in the hands of those who fought against your nomination. Isn't it singular that the men whom your it singular that the men whom your friend defeated in that contest should fall heir to such a large percentage of the offices distributed by you? It would seem from this showing that those who have your ear have adopted the rather uncertain policy of binding your friends to you by rewarding your enemles."

He then boidly charges Hoke Smith the transport of the policy of the policy of the policy of the properties of the pro

He then boldly charges floke smith with being responsible for his humiliation, and continues:

"I can accept gracefully the disappointment that comes with defeat in a fair, open and manly contest, but when I am sought out for humiliation by a boastful brag fart who delights in his present accepts every element of my personal prowess, every element of my manhood rebels and tells me to expose the treachery of him who thus outrages true manliness.

"I do not hesitate to say that I believe you really desired to tender me something in the line of honorable promotion. My failure to receive such an appointment I charge to the cowardly factics of disparagement adopted by Mr. Smith. I am somewhat amused at the insuperable gall of this man Smith, when I advert to the derisive sucroise that was felt in Georgia over the first mention of his name for a cabinet portfolio, and compare the then private citizen, who would have been a dismat failure in any canvass before his people, with the studied importance of the cabinet officer, as he passed on the qualifications of flower and the states of net officer, as he passed on the qualifica-tions of Georgians, who, in charac-ter, merit, loyalty, intellectuality and party service are superior to his in-dorsement. Fortunately for me I was educated in a school that taught men to respect sincerity, manliness and straightforwardness—elements of genstraightforwardness—clements of gentility and true courage not possessed in the slightest degree by Mr. Smith. I also entertain a sacred regard for that lofty attribute of real merit, an integrity of purpose and character that leads men to walk inflexibly in the paths of truth—which, I am constrained to say, is ruthlessly trampled upon by Mr. Smith, whenever a wanton violation of his word is necessary to serve his selfish and resentful ends.

"It was a most singular inconsistency—a gross perversion of the idea that a

"It was a most singular inconsistency—a gross perversion of the idea that a nublic office is a public trust—that led Mr. Smith to suggest to you that such an appointment would fully require me for my devotion to you and my services to the party in the last campaign, and then give an important position in the interior department to a man whose political allegiance was not known to a dearn men in Atlanta, and whose only claim on official courtesy and party reward consisted in his notoriety as 'floke Smith's balliff'—a sobriquet that does not accord with ethical practice in these parts."
